“When ‘This can’t happen here’ ... DOES happen.”

“In a world where unforeseen tragedies can occur, communities should have policies, procedures and personnel in place to deal with what we should do when ‘This can’t happen here’ ... DOES happen.”

Dr. Bill Webster

In life, stuff happens. While every loss is difficult, there is no doubt that unexpected or sudden death can be particularly traumatic. What constitutes a crisis? Is it the event itself, or is it people’s reaction to what has occurred? Dr Bill will explain some of the theories around the “WHY” of trauma and crisis; help us understand some of the traumatic reactions and some of the practical and emotional issues such a situation can create and that can linger.

The seminar is not designed to suggest changes to established policies or procedures for future crises, but to help us better understand what can be experienced by those involved, in the moment and in the future, directly and indirectly, in any disaster.

Admission free but please register by emailing info@toveybros.co.uk or telephoning 01633 266848
